ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An accounting apparatus including a processor that performs a color correction process and a printing process, a judgment unit that makes a judgment as to whether print data instructed to be printed has already been printed or not, and an accounting unit that accounts for the color correction process of the print data based on a result of the judgment. Preferably, the color correction accounting process accounts for the color correction process, and the print accounting process accounts for a print process of the print data subjected to the color correction process.

5

10